Building Communities and Networks in the Humanities

dh2015.org/public-event

DATE: 29 JUNE 2015, 1PM-4PM

VENUE: University of Western Sydney
Parramatta South campus
(EA building, Lecture Theatre G.18)

CONVENORS: Paul Arthur
(University of Western Sydney) and Tully Barnett (Flinders University)

The Australasian Consortium of Humanities Research Centres (ACHRC) invites you to the free public event, 'Building Communities and Networks in the Humanities', which has been organised to coincide with the international Digital Humanities 2015 conference at the University of Western Sydney.

20 leading experts from 10 countries will discuss new opportunities for the arts, humanities and social sciences in the digital era, addressing key questions such as 'How can we build communities for the humanities across digital and non-digital platforms?' and 'What is the most important contribution digital humanities can make in supporting arts and humanities scholarship regionally and globally?'

This event is sponsored by the Australasian Consortium of Humanities Research Centres (ACHRC) with the support of the Australian Academy of the Humanities, the Council for the Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences (CHASS), centerNet, the International Digital Humanities Training Network, and the UWS Digital Humanities Research Group.

ACHRC is a network for groups engaged in Humanities-based research. Our aim is to connect Humanities researchers and centres, both within the Australasian region and internationally, to promote relationships with cultural institutions and sector representative bodies in the wider community, and to advocate issues relevant to Humanities researchers.

This is a free, open and public event.

No RSVP is required.
